HOW will you use the information you learned?

Participants overall mentioned they learned:

- Practical strategies to use with families.
- Proactive tips for phrasing phrasing and messaging, as well as the importance of normalizing and addressing ruptures.
- The impact and importance of trust in an early intervention relationship.

There were many pieces of new and usable information today. The information and tips shared did affirm how I tend to practice and develop relationships with my families. The one thing that really surprised me is how often ruptures do actually occur. I feel that knowing that tidbit will help me remain calm when they do arise, as they are not out of the norm in any relationship.
